NEWS FROM THE COUNTRY

ERINSVILLE.

Threshing and the change of weather makes people think fall is approaching.
The show held by Mr. Andy Burth on Monday was largely attended, and also a very amusing programme.
Miss Maggie Murphy has returned home, after spending a few weeks with friends in Kingston.
Mr. J. E. Nolan left last week for his home in Duluth.
Miss Joe, and Mr. R. Hayes, of Deseront-spend Sunday at M. S. Murphy's.
Mrs. W. O'Brien, Stocco, is the guest of Mrs. J. E. Murphy.

WILTON.

A number of our boys left Tuesday to join the camp.
K. Storms is ill with malarial fever at his mother's.
Mrs. Alfred Babcock, Cataragui, who is at her father's, James Wallace's, is very low.
Mrs. Burt, who was confined to her bed for a few days, is better.
The Kickapoo Indian Medicine Co. left Tuesday for Odessa, where they will remain for a few days before going to Colebrook.
Mr. Volume, Kingston, preached in the Presbyterian church, Sunday evening.
The infant child of Emery Snider died on Tuesday.
Mr. and Mrs. R. Storms, Watertown, visited friends for a few days last week.

FREDERICKSBURG.

Contracts have been let to J. R. Perry, C. E., Napanee, for the construction of a new steel bridge over Little Creek at Dunbars (thirty five feet span), and another over Big Creek, near the town hall, known as Lucas bridge with fifty-two feet span.
The contract price for both bridges completed with new abutments is $1,763.
We are credibly informed that it has been definitely settled by those parties prospecting for oil at Verona, to put down a test well here. We understand a portion of the apparatus used at Verona will be brought here, which with the addition of a new engine will make a very complete outfit.
Perry & Grimshaw have been handling a considerable quantity of oats for shipment.
Earl Perry left last week to try his fortune at Syracuse, N. Y.
Bailey Ham and C. Howell were at Kingston on Tuesday.

CENTREVILLE.

The heavy rains of last week were a great benefit to the farmers. Fall ploughing is now being rapidly pushed forward.
Threshing is nearly completed, the yield being above the average. Apples are in abundance and as yet no sale for them.
Hop picking finished on Friday and the pickers all returned to their homes. Anyone wishing a new address had better consult us. Huskings are raging, one every night.
Mrs. Bently, of Lambton County, who was visiting friends here for a week or more, started for home on Monday.
Mr. J. Scanlin, of Enterprise, was visiting friends in Centreville West on Thursday. Come again John.
The majority from here expect to attend
the county fair at Tamworth on Thursday.
The township fair to be held here on the 26th is expected to surpass anything of the kind previously held here.
We wonder if the water has yet raised in Goose Creek.

BATH.

The central telephone office has been moved from the post office to Mr. Jas.
Toinelet's store.
Nearly sixty of the villagers took in Father McWilliams' moonlight excursion to Picton last night. They report having a very pleasant time.
Odessa's correspondent's notes of the Bath match in Odessa, in a recent issue of the Whig puts me in mind of what "my brother David heard in the blacksmith shop." He has only part of the truth like David. As there is nothing so injurious as

MAN ABOUT TOWN.

THE LAW AND THE GOSPEL.

A legal dignitary of our town, a few days ago, was put in rather a peculiar predicament. The chief caught a clergyman in the very act of breaking a by-law of the town and went so far as to stop him. The limb of the law did not arrest the divine, he only arrested his means of locomotion. After due consideration the conundrum suggested itself whether a really pious man passing over our sidewalk with the atmosphere above, around and beneath him and the sidewalk could be considered riding his bike on the sidewalk and so breaking the by-law. The supposed offender was given the benefit of the doubt owing to the intervention of a member of the legal profession.

WILL PROHIBITION STOP IT?

Several citizens of Napanee have watched, this fall, the beautiful clusters of grapes on the vines gradually approaching their ripeness of sweet maturity. But other eyes have watched the transformation, for frequently the night before the day set for garnering, some spirits, or boys moved by spirits, have passed through the orchard and the result has been that the owner of the vines has no grapes to see. If it were not for the substantial hole generally made in the fence and the foot-tracks up in the grounds through which they pass so rudely and dextrously one would think the grapes had passed into spirit land without the intervention of a wine press. We hope the youth of the town are not contracting an appetite for intoxicants in this manner, for if so, before they are bald-headed men they will need something stronger.

A New Woman at Work.

Miss Beatrix Jones of New York has taken up the art of landscape gardening, and one can often find her arranging earth and giving directions to her two crews of men, who are at work under her direction at Reef Point, her Bar Harbor home. Miss Jones is a young and attractive woman and is full of ambition. She has taken the contract to put the rough grounds of Messrs. W. H. Bliss of New York and Edgar Scott, the young Philadelphia millionaire, in trim for building. The Scott grounds cost $60,000 in their primeval state, and had Miss Jones not shown her cleverness in the new labor for women she would not,
of course, have been intrusted with the task.

As Old as Noah.

Mr. Reynolds is a bright and well-preserved old gentleman, but to his granddaughter Mabel he seems very old, indeed. She had been sitting on his knee and looking at him seriously for a long time one day, when she asked, suddenly:
"Grandpa, were you in the ark?"
"Why, no, my dear?" gasped her astonished grandparent.
Mabel's eyes grew large and round with astonishment.
"Then, grandpa," she asked, "why weren't you drowned?"

CURRENCY.

A farmer in a neighboring township thought he would have a little fun with his 15 year old son by playing ghost. He rigged himself out in a sheet and slowly approached the boy. The lad picked up a chair and went after the ghost. Before he ascertained that it was his father he had broken two of the old man's ribs and otherwise injured him.

The nomination for county councillors will be held this year on Monday, Dec. 21st, two weeks before the first Monday in January, which will be polling day. The Warden will appoint a nominating officer for each district on or before November 15th.

The election of county representatives under the new act promises to be as interesting as a provincial or general election. Some of the districts are fully as large as the provincial constituencies. By the new act the number of county representatives will be reduced from over 1,400 to 500, at a saving, it is estimated, of over $25,000 annually to the taxpayers. It is claimed by some that the new arrangement will do away with the "Ward system," and that representatives will now work, not for the benefit of their particular townships, but for the good of the whole district.

The discovery by an expert auditor that the city treasurer of Guelph is behind some $18,000 in his cash brings to the front the scheme submitted by Mr. Ferguson, M.P.P. for East Kent, of the appointment by the government of an expert in each county to audit the books of all the municipalities. The cost would be no more than under the system in vogue and the people would have a guarantee that the work was thoroughly done. The Guelph treasurer's defalcations cover a period of over 12 years, and notwithstanding the fact, each year the books were duly audited and certified correct.

Mount Forest Representative: We are reliably informed there is no truth in the statement that a Mount Forest young lady had a needle enter her waist about a year ago and that it recently worked its way out of the arm of a young man in Palmerston.

The Brantford Courier says: A little boy in Hamilton has created a good deal of interest by telling the number and colors of all the cars as they pass the house, without looking out of the window or otherwise seeing them. A day or so ago his uncle brought him to Brantford, to give another test, and he did the same thing with the cars there. No one seems to be able to explain this strange gift.

shop." He has only part of the truth like David. As there is nothing so injurious as statements partly true, will you permit me to add a few more truths. He mentioned that it was mean and dishonorable to play outsiders and that Odessa had always played her own men, I am pleased to learn that Odessa has extended her limits to Yarker, Murvale and Ernestown Station. It extended to Newburg last year. Is Odessa shrinking on that side? He should also have added that it was "mean and dishonorable" when beaten to have a scramble for the ball and refuse to give it to the winning team. Probably they thought it was a "fowl." He should have added also that it was wrong for players to permit outsiders to insult the umpires and for the players to coach the children and rabble to interfere with the game in every way that would annoy the visiting team. These minor (?) items his great mind overlooked.

Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Prouty and sons left this morning for their N. Y. home, after a 12 weeks stay at the Bay View Villa carrying with them the best wishes of all who had the pleasure of their acquaintance.

Miss Anna Hogle, of Bath, is the guest of W. A. Hogle, Ernestown, for a few days.

Mr. John Timmerman, of Odessa, made friendly calls in Bath on Sunday last.

KINGSFORD.

A pretty wedding was solemnized at the residence of Mr. Jas. Doyle, when his third daughter, Miss Lizzie, was united in the holy bonds of matrimony to Mr. Harry Benson McCabe, of Napanee. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Mr. Swaine of Selby. The bride was tastefully attired in pale blue cashmere and trimmed with lace and ribbon hat and white slippers to match. She was attended by Miss Frink, cousin of the groom, who was attired in blue cashmere and looked beautiful. Mr. John Doyle did the honors for the groom. The nuptial knot was tied at 11 o'clock a.m. in the presence of about thirty guests. Both the bride and groom were made the recipients of many handsome and costly presents, carrying with them the good wishes of the donors. After the ceremony was performed a most elaborate and substantial dinner was served and the evening was spent in music and dancing was indulged in until quite a late hour. The young couple are highly esteemed by one and all and we wish them a long and prosperous wedded life. The presents from the groomsmen and bridesmaids were very pretty, Mr. Doyle a lovely flowered set of dishes, and Miss Frink a glass desert dish.

Miss Maggie McCullough, who has been spending a few weeks in this vicinity, returned to Belleville on Saturday.

Miss Allie Rose, of Napanee, is spending a few days with Mrs. Alex. Hewitt of this place.

Mrs. Baker and Mrs. Kennedy returned home on Sunday after spending a week with their sister, Mrs. James Doyle.

Mrs. John Gurubul continues poorly.

Mr. and Mrs. James Schermerhorn and daughter Grace of 5th con., spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. Albert Bowen.

Thomas James Russell and two sisters, spent Sunday the guest at Thos. Winters.

Eddie Hewitt of the 7th con. spent Sunday with his cousin D. Doyle of this place.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Matchett, of Kennebec, are renewing old acquaintances in and around Kingsford.

A. W. H. Doyle, wife, and sister, spent Sunday with his sister Mrs. Wm. Provins.

Quilting bee at Mrs. James McHenry's on Tuesday.

A picnic was given in aid of the Sunday School Scholars on Saturday last, was held at Wm. Sexsmith's grove. A good afternoon was spent, both young and old enjoyed themselves, tables were laid on the grass, from 4 to 6 tea was served, candies and peanuts, lemonade, swinging and all sorts of amusements.

The paper is immersed in wax, stearine and similar substances, and burns with a light, smokeless and odorless flame. Cut into match lengths, it is dipped into phosphorous wax, like the common wax match. The invention is regarded as a timely one, as the wood used in the making of matches is constantly growing more scarce and costly.

Wax For Preserving Timber.

Another method of preserving timber has recently been tried. It consists in dissolving in naphtha the heavy oils and waxes left after the distillation of petroleum, and forcing the solution into the seasoned timber in the same manner as in creosoting. The timber is then heated, when the naphtha evaporates, and is recovered in a cooling chamber, while the waxes, etc., remain behind in the wood, waterproofing it.

Black Trimming.

Black trimmings are all the rage, a touch of black is seen on all the smart gowns, black satin is almost exclusively used for the folded corselets and bodice-shaped belts, and a number of rows of quarter-inch black ribbon velvet makes a very effective trimming. Remember to sew it only on one edge; to fasten both gives it a very stiff look.

Kinds Words Come From Public Institutions

As Well As From Private Individuals.

All Classes and Creeds Praise Paine's Celery Compound.

Public institutions throughout Canada are as ready to acknowledge the marvellous virtues of Paine's Celery Compound as are private individuals.

For many years, a large number of our public, benevolent and religious corporations have used Paine's Celery Compound for the benefit of old and young, and if it were possible to publish all the statements made by the inmates, scores of the letters would prove interesting and entertaining.

In institutions like those referred to, where hundreds are cared for every year, all the common ills and diseases of every day life are found, and many hundreds have been made well and strong by Paine's Celery Compound that the physicians of these institutions were unable to cure by the ordinary means.

To-day this grand curing work is still going on in many of the largest and most prominent of our public places, and no other medicine will be tolerated but Paine's Celery Compound, which shows the esteem and confidence in which the medicine is held.

One of the noted institutions that has given testimony for Paine's Celery Compound is the immense conventual educational house on the St. Lawrence, near Montreal, and known as the "Convent of the Holy Names." The ladies of this house write as follows:

"We feel it a duty to add our testimony in favor of your 'wonder-working' Paine's Celery Compound. Many Sisters, suffering from debility, dyspepsia, sleeplessness and indigestion, have been completely relieved after taking it.

"We shall strongly recommend its use in all our houses as the best medicine to restore health, and give tone and vigor to for Infants and Children.

MOTHERS, Do You Know that Paregoric, Bateman's Drops, Godfrey's Cordial, many so-called Soothing Syrups, and most remedies for children are composed of opium or morphine?

Do You Know that opium and morphine are stupefying narcotic poisons?

Do You Know that in most countries druggists are not permitted to sell narcotics without labeling them poisons?

Do You Know that you should not permit any medicine to be given your child unless you or your physician know of what it is composed?

Do You Know that Castoria is a purely vegetable preparation, and that a list of its ingredients is published with every bottle?

Do You Know that Castoria is the prescription of the famous Dr. Samuel Pitcher. That it has been in use for nearly thirty years, and that more Castoria is now sold than of all other remedies for children combined?

Do You Know that the Patent Office Department of the United States, and of other countries, have issued exclusive right to Dr. Pitcher and his assigns to use the word "Castoria" and its formula, and that to imitate them is a state prison offense?

Do You Know that one of the reasons for granting this government protection was because Castoria had been proven to be absolutely harmless?

Do You Know that 35 average doses of Castoria are furnished for 35 cents, or one cent a dose?

Do You Know that when possessed of this perfect preparation, your children may be kept well, and that you may have unbroken rest?

Well, these things are worth knowing. They are facts.

THERE is talk of dethroning the Sultan of Turkey. In the name of the suffering Armenians it can't be done too soon.

THE Globe says the adoption of prohibition in Canada would mean a loss of $7,000,000 of revenue. This has been and will doubtless continue to be a potent factor in retarding legislation of this character.

WE are in receipt of a letter from the Rev. Arthur Jarvis, in which he agrees with us that it would be unwise to admit a controversy upon agnosticism into our columns. For his own part he has no anxiety to enter into such a battle but if it is necessary he will not shrink from it.

Mr. Jarvis points out in his letter: [1] Your resume of the controversy is correct except that you state that I wrote to the "World." I did not. All I had to do in the matter was to correct the mis-statement that my choir took part in an agnostic "service." This I did in our own local papers. How it got into the "World" I don't know.

(2) You further credit me with insinuating that Ellis, by giving you the report made use of the sad occasion to advertise himself &c. If you will read my letter you will see that I was referring to his attack on myself not to the notice in THE EXPRESS. It was he who made it unpleasant for the Pringle family by writing that letter for which there was no occasion.

THE EXPRESS desires to be perfectly fair in the matter and as Mr. Jarvis has intimated that with the publication of the above he is satisfied to rest his case we publish the extracts from his letter with the hope that so far as we are concerned the controversy will

A VISIT TO THE HOME OF GENERAL NICHOLAS HERKIMER.

AND TO OLD FORT HERKIMER CHURCH NEAR LITTLE FALLS, N. Y.

DEAR EDITOR:—On Tuesday morning, Sept. 1, we hastily prepared for our proposed visit to the old home of General Nicholas Herkimer, of revolutionary fame, and from whom the County of Herkimer, N. Y. derives its name.

Herkimer county is centrally distant from Albany eighty miles, its population is 55,000, and it contains 1,745 square miles. Its surface is a hilly upland with a series of ridges extending in a general north and south direction. Mohawk river flows east at right angles and separates the highland into two distinct parts. The Hasen-clever mountains lie along the west border of the county, north of the Mohawk, and from the window before which I pen these lines, I look out over their green, fertile, sloping sides and as far as the eye can reach follow wooded crest after crest; then looking directly down the hill I watch the flashing of the water of West Canada Creek winding along through a lovely valley. Truly one might travel the world over and not find a more beautiful spot than this—Osborn Hill.

Herkimer is the county town of Herkimer county. It has ten miles of streets, three lines of railways, fifteen manufactories, many handsome public and private buildings, and 5,000 inhabitants. The people living here had a village organization and government under a legislative act as early as 1807.

The greatest canal, Erie, and the greatest Railway, of the continent, the New York Central, passes through the Herkimer Hills following the fertile valley of the Mohawk. Herkimer county is historic ground as many of the most stirring events in the great struggle for independence occurred within its limits.

But I must hasten. General Herkimer's residence is situated about two and a half miles below the city of Little Falls, on the south bank of the Mohawk. We arrived at noon after a most enjoyable drive. (The scenery below Little Falls is superb. The mountains on each side of the river are masses of naked, variable colored rocks rising perpendicular to a height of 500 to 600 ft.)

With appetites sharpened by our long drive we greatly enjoyed our little picnic in the grove, discussing at the same time the various events connected with the spot, and as we looked toward the opposite side of the river, within a radius of half a mile we see the West Shore R. R., the Erie Canal, the drive road, Mohawk River, New York Central R. R. and the Dolgeville R. R. all, except the latter, running parallel.

Having finished our repast we first inspected the old powder house over which a barn has been erected. The powder house is built entirely of stone with a vaulted roof. It is about 24 x 15 ft. and 10 ft to top of arch. It is in a good state of preservation as is also the General's house with which it is said to be connected by means of a secret underground passage. The residence is built of dark red brick imported from Holland about 1764 and cost about $8,000. As the family living in it were at dinner we proceeded to the graveyard situated upon a knoll a short distance southeast of the house. The state has purchased the land in front of the yard and has built a handsome stone wall about the latter place. Men were at work in the yard and a large monument, the dimensions of which I have forgotten is to be erected there this month. The foundation for the stone has been completed, and the stone itself is so large that it has been necessary to build a track from the West Shore R. R. to the yard in order to convey it to the spot where it is to stand in honor of the dead General. At present a plain marble slab marks his grave and bears the following inscription:—

NOT SO VERY RADICAL

THE SWISS INITIATIVE AND REFER-ENDUM.

The Provisions of the Law in the Small,
Liberty-Loving Republic—How They May Be Made Serviceable in the New-World Countries.

The initiative and referendum has found its highest development in Switzerland, especially in the cantons. The Swiss constitution provides that "federal laws shall be submitted for acceptance or rejection by the people if the demand is made by 30,000 voters, or by eight cantons." This is the referendum, by which laws that have been passed by the legislative body must be submitted to the people for approval. The essential point about the initiative is that a certain portion of the voters may petition that a law upon a certain question shall be drafted and presented to the voters for approval or rejection. The Swiss federal constitution does not provide for the initiative in ordinary legislation, but the system is in use for that purpose in some of the cantons, which may be said to correspond to the States of our Union. The initiative may be used, however, for effecting constitutional changes in the federal government. Following is the provision for amending the federal constitution:

"When either council of the Federal Assembly passes a resolution for amendment of the federal constitution and the other council does not agree, or when 50,000 Swiss voters demand amendment, the question whether the federal constitution ought to be amended is, in either case, submitted to a vote of the Swiss people, voting yes or no. If in either case the majority of the Swiss citizens who vote pronounce in the affirmative, there shall be a new election of both councils for the purpose of preparing amendments."

The working of this system in Switzerland and in the cantons composing it has been commended. The results have not been so encouraging to the radical element as many had anticipated. In fact, the Swiss people have shown a decided conservatism and caution whenever laws have been submitted to them under the referendum. The system is particularly suited to the conditions in Switzerland, because that is a small country. Yet, even there, we find it used less in federal than in cantonal affairs. The larger territory and population the greater the difficulty in putting the system into use. The referendum is best suited to use in local affairs. It may be used to great advantage in state affairs, but it is questionable in this country if it would be wise to adopt the referendum in national affairs, except for submitting constitutional amendments. There is less scope for the use of the initiative than for the referendum and not so urgent reasons for its adoption.

The referendum has been growing in use in this country. Only last year two important measures—the Torrens law and the civil service law—were submitted to the voters of Chicago for

The "Kelsey" Corrugated Warm Air Generator.

An ordinary Hot Air Furnace will produce heat if you will only supply enough fuel. The "Kelsey" has several special and valuable features, but most important is that it will give more heat with less fuel and is the most durable heater made.
The "Kelsey" is not being constructed of several upright, tubular, corrugated, cast iron sections (see cut) around which the fire passes and up through which the cold air passes while being heated, and this entire section being wrapped with a heavy steel casing which becomes heated by the fire striking it when passing down outside of upright sections towards smoke pipe, it in turn warms the air that passes up from this steel casing and the gas is heated by the fire striking it. This is why the "Kelsey" has three times more radiating surface and warm air capacity than an ordinary furnace. The "Kelsey" heats every room evenly, wherever located, with a nice, mild, healthful warm air that will not injure your furniture.
The "Kelsey" will heat rooms 60 feet distant.
The "Kelsey" does not heat your cellar.
The "Kelsey" is absolutely gas and dust proof.

we are concerned the controversy will cease.

THE Hon. J. W. Longley, Attorney General of Nova Scotia, in an able article on the Silver Question in the September Canadian Magazine points out that the fight in the United States purports to be between silver and gold, but that this is the most superficial view of the real issue. It is really a rising of the masses against the class legislation that is making millionaires of the few and paupers of the many.

The mass of the people perceive that the Democrats are impotent to grant them the relief from the pernicious system of Protection that has fostered combines and monopolies at the expense of the great bulk of the people. Cleveland, who was elected to break down the high tariff designed for the benefit of the privileged few was foiled in his efforts by men within his own ranks who represented the monopolistic class. Every honest tariff reformer was disappointed and grieved by the utter humiliating failure of the Democratic party to do anything towards striking a blow at the combines. Mr. Longley points out that "The essence of the silver movement is a rebellion against the power of accumulated wealth, which, acquired by special and unfair means, has for years exercised an undue control and over-weening influence. It has controlled Presidents and Congresses. It dictates the utterances of the Press. The pulpit cringes before it. Representing not more than four or five per cent of the population of the United States, it has more real influence in shaping the policy of the nation than eighty per cent of the toiling masses. Under a system of popular government this cannot go on forever. The people will yet rule and this silver movement looks as if they had taken the bit in their mouth, and were resolved to have a great deal to say as to how the nation should be governed. It does not disturb the average silver man to tell him that the free coinage of silver dollars at the ratio to gold of 16 to 1 will injure the national credit and lead to a panic in Wall Street.

That is just what he wants. He believes—and this, of course, is very immoral—that a large portion of the money owed to the creditor class has been unjustly acquired, and he is not worried at the thought that the debt should be paid in silver even though it is really but fifty-cents on the dollar. The movement for silver is not essentially different from a movement to strike down special privileges, high duties, and land monopolies: but it is more superficially specious and more easily and quickly appeals to the imagination and sympathy of the mass of the people.

It looks now as if the forces arrayed against the new movement were too strong to give it any reasonable chance of success. Wall Street is thoroughly aroused and will spend its millions freely to crush out such a dangerous theory. But the fight is an open and undisguised one. The silver men will point out that they are fighting against these very forces and appeal to the victims of the gold power to protect themselves from their ancient and implacable enemies. Mr. Bryan will have the support of those who are feeling the pinch of poverty—who are conscious of inequality of opportunity in the industrial conditions of the nation, and who would like to see existing conditions uprooted through revolution and a little anarchy were involved in the transition."

GENERAL
NICHOLAS HERKIMER
DIED
AUG. 17, 1777.

Ten days after the battle of Oriskany, in which engagement he received wounds which caused his death.

The graveyard is about 170 x 180 ft. Returning to the house we first visited the cellar and looked out through the port-holes by means of which the Indians were kept at bay. Entering the house we were conducted through the various apartments, examining the queer little recesses that were formerly used as bed-chambers, we stood within the room in which the General died, which by-the-way is handsomely wainscotted in white pine wrought into neat mouldings and panels. We even visited the garret—the third story—whose great timbers are crossed and braced equal to the iron frame-work of one of the many bridges about here. We looked around for some souvenir of the place, and what do you suppose I secured? A brick from the wall, and surely I could not have procured a more fitting one. It shall occupy an important position among my small collection of old relics. The walls of the house are two feet thick, every second course being laid lengthwise instead of every fifth as is done now-a-days. We had not long to remain here as we wished to visit old Fort Herkimer Church, and though loath to leave, we were obliged to hasten away. We arrived at Fort Herkimer, or Konari as the French called it, about four o'clock. Fort Herkimer Church was erected sometime between the year 1751 and 1753, but previous to this a church, upon the same site was built of logs in 1725. The church is built of stone with great stone braces at each corner. The interior has lately been remodeled, the gallery being shut off, the high backed seats cut down, a platform erected etc., in fact it has been considerably modernized and spoiled. The old pulpit, however has not been disturbed and is poised up in the air like a bird-cage with a circular sounding board above it. This is very seldom used now, a modern reading desk upon the platform, being used instead. The church was used formerly as a place of refuge and stood within the palisaded walls of the fort. A large door has been walled up, the windows have been changed and the port holes walled up. The old walls of the fort were used in the construction of the Erie Canal. The oldest gravestone to be found in the valley of the upper Mohawk rests against the south side of the church. It is of red sandstone, surcharged with mica and is about three feet in width by six feet in length. It completely covers the grave and bears this inscription:
HERE RESTS THE BODY OF,
JOHN KING, ESQ.

Of the Kingdom of Ireland, Capt of one of His Majesty's Independent Companies of the Province,
Who departed this life the 20th day of September 1755.

In the 30th year of his age.
It has been said that no other section of country in the United States of like extent, suffered as much from the two wars French and Indian, and the Revolutionary war as did the people of this vicinity.

Concerning the battle of Oriskany in which Gen. Herkimer received his death wounds, I will simply refer any who may feel interested to American History as I feel I have already trespassed too much upon your patience and space.

submitted to the voters of Chicago for approval. There is a growing tendency, and it is a healthy one, to submit such questions to the people. It would be well if provisions were made for submitting important franchise questions to the voters.

There is also a growing fondness for the referendum in state matters. One hundred years ago constitutions generally were adopted and put in force by constitutional conventions without submission to the people. Now there are very few states, indeed, in which constitutional changes can be effected without the sanction of the voters. Such laws, for example, as those for the regulation of the liquor traffic, are frequently submitted to popular vote. In this country, however, such submission is always at the will of the legislative body. The voters can not demand submission of a question to them, as in Switzerland.

Too frequently legislatures in American States cannot be trusted. As a consequence it has been customary to limit their powers by constitution, with the result that in forbidding the legislature to do certain things the people oftentimes have tied their own hands and placed it out of their power to secure by legislation reforms which are badly needed. Here is one field where the increased use of the referendum would be extremely helpful. Instead of enumerating by constitution an ever-increasing number of things which legislatures may not do, it would be better to stipulate that laws might be passed upon these subjects provided they were submitted to the voters and approved.—Chicago Record.

A Home-Made Barometer.

There is no reason why every boy should not possess a barometer of his own, which he will find not only endlessly useful in planning his little holiday trips, but which will afford him infinite interest as well.

All he has to do is to take a gramme each of camphor, saltpetre and ammonia salts and dissolve them in about thirteen drams of alcohol. When the dissolution is complete, shake the mixture well and pour it into a glass bottle, one rather long for its width is preferred. Cork tightly and seal with wax so as to prevent the air from penetrating into the bottle.

Expose this improvised barometer on the outside of the window, on the north side of the house, if possible, and the crystallizations, which are produced announce a change in the weather.

Absolute clearness of the liquid denotes fair weather.

If the liquid becomes disturbed or rainy as we say, it is a sign of rain.

If downy masses form in the bottom of the bottle it will freeze, or at least the thermometer will descend; the more the masses rise toward the top, the more rigorous will the cold become.

Little stars in the liquid foretell a hard storm.

SEPTEMBER.

We are drinking the wine of the ages,
From cups that are brimming over
With the sweet of a honey unbought with money,
Distilled from the heart of the clover.

The flowers fringe on the way-side
Are in raiment of purple and gold;
To the rough-hewn edge of the old stone ledge
The clinging brier-vines hold.

We are breaking life's fine elixir
In the waft of the perfumed breeze,
The sudden showers, the sunlit hours,
The rustle of leaves on the trees.

The fathomless blue of the heaven,
The beauty and bloom of the day,
Are making us young—they are waking the tongue
Of the years that have passed away.

'Tis the radiant, rare September,
With the clusters ripe on the vine,
With scents that mingle in spicy tingle
On the hill slope's glimmering line.

And summer's a step behind us,
And autumn's a thought before,
And each fleet sweet day that we meet on the way
Is an angel at the door.

Bismarck as a Joker.

The following incident in the life of the iron chancellor recently appeared in one of the New York papers:

"Bismarck and a friend, after a heavy day's shooting, sat together sipping their wine and comparing notes of their day's adventures. Bismarck's friend complained that he was excessively tired and would be unable to get up at 7 o'clock the next morning to join the sport. Bismarck assured him that he would see that he got up at the right time, whether he would or not.

"On retiring to their bedrooms, which adjoined each other, he barred and barricaded his door to prevent Bismarck from carrying out his threat.

"At half-past 6 on the following morning the chancellor knocked at the door, calling on his friend to get up. His friend didn't, but turned on his pillow to enjoy another snooze. Then Bismarck seized his gun, went into the yard and fired through the window of his friend's bed room, hitting the ceiling above the bed and bringing a shower of plaster down on the head and shoulders of the sleeper.

"In the greatest alarm, his friend arose and looked out of the window to see what was the matter. Seeing nobody, he hastily donned his clothes and ran down stairs. Here he met Bismarck, who gravely bade him 'good morning,' and added: 'I hope you slept well; it is just striking 7.'"

BULL BLOOD-THIRST.

SPANISH LITERATURE AS INDICATIVE OF IT AS A FIGHT ITSELF.

Eleven Spanish Publications Devoted Exclusively to Bull Fighting—Flaming Pictures of the Mideous National Sport.

A correspondent who has recently been traveling in Spain, Portugal, Maderia and the Spanish islands has just sent to a New York Press writer several numbers of a paper called La Lidia, which is published in Madrid, and is one of about eleven publications in Spain which are devoted to the subject of bull fighting. It is illustrated with flaming pictures of the hideous national sport. Gaudily dressed picadores, banderilleros, chulos and matadores; horses with blood pouring from gashes in their abdomens and with bowels protruding; maddened bulls with decorated darts sticking in their bleeding hides; an audience delighted at the sight of the blood and, last scene of all, gayly caparisoned horses dragging away by means of a sort of tackle the mortally wounded bull.

Perhaps the most significant of all the florid illustrations in La Lidia is one covering a double sheet and showing as the central medallion of an allegorical representation an arena containing a gored horse, some men and a bull being infuriated with the red flag. This medallion is decorated with red and gold, and the green palm leaf as a border, and is surmounted by a shield on which the cross is blazoned and on which rests the royal crown of Spain. At the base of the picture is an immense bull's head decorated with all the adjuncts of the ring, and with a large arena in the distance.

Above it are seated the typical peasants, flower decorated and with musical instruments. Above this, on the left are the emblems of art, sculpture and music; on the right the emblems of science and mechanic arts; and as the climax of absurdity, near the top of the picture, a winged figure of fame blowing a blast of victory from a trumpet from which waves the national flag, and holding in her right hand the laurel wreath.

The correspondent referred to draws a comparison between Maderia and the neighboring Canary islands, under Spanish rule, which is unfavorable to the latter. Tenerife is a veritable hell for animals. In Lisbon so much general cruelty was not observable as in Madrid (where a society which once existed to protect animals has now existed to protect animals has now been extinct eight years), but he quotes from the Diario de Noticias de Lisbon an extract from the letter of one who signs himself (most appropriately) "John the Devil," which argues the necessity for the killing of bulls and horses in reality instead of having sham fights and only accidentally killing the bull, as has been somewhat the custom there. Bull fighting is on the increase in Lisbon. The new bull ring in that city cost $150,000, and seats 11,000 people.

The horses used in the Madrid bull fights come mostly from the army and constabulary forces, and were once first-class animals. The Government requires tall horses, and they are also greater favorites in the bull ring, as the populace is not so well satisfied if the bulls cannot get their horns under them to rip them open properly. This is one of the main attractions. A strong bull can impale a horse on his horns, lift him and throw him. Such is the disposition engendered by these sights that a Spanish lady who had attended one was heard by another informant of the present writer complaining because she had seen a bull which was too cowardly to rip the horse open as he should!

Nansen's Exploit.

Frithjof Nansen has failed to reach the North Pole, but he has performed the most remarkable exploit in the history of modern arctic exploration, says the New York Journal. He has made a longer advance at a single stride than all his predecessors put together for nearly three hundred years. In 1667 Hendrik Hudson reached the neighborhood of 82 degrees north latitude. For two hundred and seventy-five years the world's explorers struggled to better that record, and mile by mile they pushed their way northward with suffering and death dogging their footsteps until, on May 13, 1882, Lockwood and Brainerd, of the Greeley expedition, planted their flag 83 degrees 21 minutes. A degree and a half in two hundred and seventy-five years of effort. Lockwood and Brainerd beat the best previous record by only three miles, and yet their achievement has been the admiration of the world ever since. It has stood untouched for fourteen years, and now all at once Nansen has advanced the standard of exploration nearly two hundred miles at a leap. He has gone to latitude 83 degrees 14 minutes—nearly twice as far beyond Lockwood and Brainerd as they went beyond Hudson. He has covered nearly half the distance that remained to be traveled to the pole. Between Nansen's furthest point and that ultimate goal of endeavor there is a gap of only 225 geographical or 282 statute miles.

Although Nansen's theory about the drift of a current across the Pole may not have been correct, he has proved that the plan of his voyage was not as foolhardy as it seemed. He cut loose from bases of supply and allowed his ship to be locked in the ice, to be carried wherever the drift might take it. That this scheme has accomplished twice as much in the way of progress as all the arduous explorations of nearly 300 years, and has done it apparently without the loss of a single life is a fact that the critics will find it hard to dispose of.

Banana Pie.

Beat the yolks of two eggs very light with one cup of crumbled cake, a half cup of sugar, butter the size of a walnut and a little rich cream. Flavor with lemon or vanilla, then stir in two large bananas, cut in thin slices, pour the mixture into a pie pan lined with good paste and bake in a quick oven. While it is baking beat the whites of two eggs very light with a little rose-water and three tablespoonsful of powdered sugar. Take out the pie, drop the meringue in clots over the top of it and set back in the oven until it is a pale brown.

The Ills of Life Almost all the ill of life arise from wrong action of the stomach, liver and bowels, therefore wisdom is shown by using Burdock Blood Bitters to regulate, strengthen and purify the organs, thus preventing and curing all diseases from a common impure to the worst scrofulous core.

King Oscar of Sweden is not popular in Norway. During a recent tour through that country he was about to enter a railway car when he noticed a workman who had kept his hat on. With the words, "Off with your hat," the King knocked it off his head with his cane, to the indignation of the bystanders.

Italy's trials have fired the heart of Rafael Glianelli, who for several years has enjoyed a monopoly of the street piano business in Toronto, and has grown rich out of it. He has sailed for his native land with his family, in order that his eldest son may join the army. The Italian colony of Toronto gave the Glianellis an enthusiastic send-off.

Plans for a revolving sky-scraper 400 feet high and built of steel have been submitted to the Paris exhibition commission. The twenty-four stories are to be let for restaurants, concert halls, theatres and so forth. The building will turn slowly on its axis like a merry-go-round, and enable visitors to survey the whole country around Paris while they eat their dinners.

A LONDON RUM SHOP.

DEGRADED MEN AND WOMEN SEEN IN "THE PRINCESS ALICE."

A Faithful Description of One Saturday Night Reads Like the Product of a Diseased Imagination—Drink the Sole Object of the Unfortunates.

The promoters of the rum-shops of East London have some nice-sounding names for the dives in which manhood and womanhood are hourly perishing. One of the most loathsome dens, situated at Commercial and Wentworth-streets, in the Whitechapel district, is called "The Princess Alice."
A place almost as bad, standing near the north entrance to Tower Bridge, bears the title of "The Angel." These resorts are beyond adequate portrayal in words. They are so thoroughly and frightfully wicked, so utter and in-famously low, that anything like a faithful description of them would read like the product of a diseased imagination.

Saturday nights at "The Princess" witness wholesale carnivals of drunkenness. At these times the compartments are crowded almost to suffocation, and the wretches gathered there struggle with one another for precedence at the bar. They are not all men by any means. Oftener they are more than half women. The latter not infrequently have a child or two with them. It is a mere commonplace to see dissolute mothers, the suggestion of every virtue obliterated from their faces, feeding their little girls ale or beer on the counters of this scandalous den. The men and women all crowd in together, and with liquor like hogs. Their dress without exception is the dress of desperate poverty. The men wear an infinite variety of hats, clothes and shoes, but none of them has any article of apparel but that is green with age and heavy with filth. Their faces are blotched, distorted and unshaven, and their eyes bear witness to awful eras of sleeplessness and dissipation. They drink until their money is exhausted, or until they can scarcely stand, when

be. It seldom rises above rags, and very dirty rags at that. It is harrow-

...they can scarcely stand, when they go out of their own accord, or are forced out and stagger away with maudlin mutterings. When the crowds in "The Princess" are great, one may see a man, in advanced stages of intoxication, braced against the wall half asleep, held from falling by the crush about him. Sometimes he loses consciousness entirely, and goes down in a head. Then the bartender clears the compartment sufficiently to drag the wretch to the sidewalk. A policeman comes along, wakes the offed-up man, and if he can walk, starts him off. If he is past walking, the officer calls for the wagon and sends him in.

The chief horror of "The Princess Alice," however, is presented in the degradation of its female clientele. In America the majority of drunkards, especially outside the large cities, are men. In Liverpool and London, according to the statistics of the Women's Christian Temperance Union, there are about six drunken women to one drunken man, and casual observation would indicate this proportion to be true. At "The Princess Alice," the spectacle of this fall of woman is complete. When the mind oscillates from the purest and loveliest type of the diviner part of God's noblest work to the creature of the same sex that frequents this rum-shop, it sweeps the infinite! One cannot think intently of the two sides by side—so definitely and violently antithetical are they—without experiencing a shock to his reason. The chasm is greater than the human intellect can span and not suffer a strain. At a given time, it must rest wholly on one side or wholly on the other.

The females of "The Princess Alice" are not necessarily habitués of resorts. Many of them are mothers that the curse of drink has caused to forget every obligation of motherhood and home. Many of them are little past girlhood and yet are one stage lower, in the classification that slum life imposes, than the so-called "respectable" inmates of resorts. In the course of their fall, they have probably stopped for a time on the level of the less depraved, but drink would not permit them to remain there. It has dragged them still lower. It has made them such beasts that the doors of the resorts are closed against them, and the inmates of such places have come to feel that there is a depth of social decay above which even they stand, as on an eminence. Drink is the overwhelming passion of these outcasts. They seem to have no other passion, no other pleasure, no other concern, of any sort whatever. Numbers of them know nothing about home life, nothing of affection, nothing of any one of the fundamental humanities. The appetite for drink possesses and consumes them; it causes them to lie and cheat, to beg and steal; any form of iniquity is welcome if it only holds out the promise of a quantity of rum. Like that of the men, the dress of "Not if we have winter weather again. That's the beauty of having a grate."

"I'm not cold."
"Neither am I, for that matter, but you know how cheerful a grate fire looks on a cool evening; it lights up the whole street."
"Then it is for the benefit of our neighbors? I wish one of them would kindle it! If there is one thing I hate more than another it's going into the basement to hunt kindling and getting my hair full of cobwebs."
"Well, Phillander, his Sunday night and the girl is out and either you or I will have to kindle that fire."

Mr. Skidmore went off grumbling and out the kindling. He also bruised his nose badly by a back-headed kick of the ax, and brushed down half a hundred cobwebs looking for the excelsior lighting pads. But he made the fire, while Mrs. Skidmore sat in a rocker and bossed the job. And when it had burnt down to a clear coal blaze that shone out on the street like a beacon light, he felt the satisfaction of a heroic deed accomplished, and looked at his wife for approval. Coincident with that look his wife gave a wild scream.

"My diamonds! My diamonds!"
"Stolen?" asked her husband in alarm.
"No! no! Worse! Burned up in the fire. I hid them in the grate!"
"It's too late to save them now," he said as his wife tore the coals apart.
"Never mind, Luella, I will buy you new ones."

"I don't want new ones!" she cried. "I want my rings and pins and ornaments that are dear from association! Oh, how stupid of me not to remember they were there!"
"I think it was more stupid to ever put them there. However, I will forgive you on one condition, and what is more to the purpose, replace them. Promise that you will never again ask me to make a grate fire!"
"I never want you to make one for me after this exploit, Mr. Skidmore."
"Then here are your diamonds. I fished them out just as the fire started, but you can thank your lucky stars they were not reduced to their original carbon. Put them in the ash barrel the next time."
But Mrs. Skidmore declared there would be no next time, for she would hereafter wear her diamonds even if she resembled a mountain of light.—Detroit Free Press.

BASIC STEEL RAILS.

An Austrian Scientist Proves the Metal to Be Valuable.

The use of basic steel rails having a year or two ago been prohibited on the Austrian State Railways, Professor Tetmajer, of the Polytechnic School of Zurich, Switzerland, published a paper in which he defended the use of such rails. The action of the Austrian Government was due largely to two lots of inferior rails having been furnished by a German company. On the representation of the officers of a large basic Bessemer steel plant the Government appointed a commission to investigate the matter (the firm referred to selecting two members), and as a result of this investigation the order was reversed, although basic rails are still required to show a tensile strength of 71,000 pounds per square inch, while for ordinary Bessemer rails a tensile strength of only 66,800 pounds is required.

Since 1878 the basic process has developed rapidly. In 1880 only 50,000 tons were made, while in 1893 the output was 3,638,556 metric tons, of which about 20 to 25 per cent. was made by the basic open-hearth process. The metal is said to meet with a steadily increasing application in the construction of bridges and railways all over the continent of Europe and England. As one of the principal objections made to basic steel has been the alleged irregularity of its composition, Professor Tetmajer gave in his paper a number of analyses showing that great regularity is actually obtained in the output of many large works and referred to the value of the Darby and Meyer recarburization process in this connection, and also states that the basic Bessemer boiler plates of the Peine works compete successfully with the best brands of Siemens-Martin steel.

Returns from the state railways of Finland and Hungary showed that the wearing quality of basic Bessemer rails is above the general average, in some cases showing a decided superiority. The renewals of defective rails are also less than with acid rails. From the information collected, Professor Tetmajer concluded that basic Bessemer rail steel can be made with great regularity in its composition and free from oxygen and red shortness, and also that by the application of the Darby and Meyer recarburization processes any grade of hardness can be easily and regularly obtained.

Straightening a Chimney.

The straightening of a chimney stack at a brick and tile works located at Earnest, Pa., was recently accomplished in a novel manner. According to a description published in the Engineering News the stack is 122 feet high, 11 feet square at the base, tapering somewhat at the top, and weighs 400 tons. The walls are 36 inches thick. The top was found to be leaning 45 inches from the vertical line. To right the chimney 10 1/2 inches of brick work was removed from the foundations on three sides. As the brick were removed, square blocks of wood were inserted one after another until three sides of the structure rested on the blocks. Between the blocks substantial brick piers, six inches high, were built, leaving a space four and a half inches between the top of the piers and the bottom of the undermined brick work. The blocks were then set on fire and kept burning evenly. If one burned faster than the others the fire on that particular block was checked so that all were made to burn uniformly and as the blocks were reduced to ashes the stack slowly righted. As the top gradually swung back through the 45 inch arch small fissures appeared near the base. In every groove a steel wedge was driven to maintain the weight of the walls. The entire work consumed one day.

"Major, if you don't punish that boy I will!"

The words fell sternly from the lips of Mrs. Domo, who was ruefully surveying the wreck of her best reading lamp.

"Bob!" said the major, severely, "come here. Mariah, leave the room!" Mrs. Domo went into the dining room and shut the door to keep out the horrid sounds.

"Whack! Whack! Whack!" from the major.

"Wow! O, wow! I won't do it again!" from the boy.

"Whack! Whack! Whack! Now, will you break lamp shades, you young whelp of Satan?"

"No-o! No-o!" sobbed Bobby.

"Whack! Whack! Whack!"

Mrs. Domo's ire by this time was quite evaporated.

Again that dreadful slipper fell, and again the air was rent with the yells of tortured innocence.

"O, major, stop!"

"Not by a jugful! We're having a splendid time in here. Whack! Whack! Whack!"

Mrs. Domo could stand it no longer. "Stop it, you big brute!" she exclaimed, rushing into the apartment.

Then she grew madder than ever. There on his hands and knees was the major galloping around on the carpet, while Bobby was lurching a slipper and giving vent to terrified cries of woe.—Chicago Dispatch.

"These short bicycle skirts are certainly a great lever," said the South Side man as he looked out of the car window at a passing wheelwoman. "Especially for a somewhat nearsighted man," he somewhat irrelevantly added. Then he sighed as if at some passing recollection and presently continued:

"Early last evening I was walking near my home when a passing wheel-

It may be there are forms of human life Upon old continents of shrouded stars; It may be there are men grown mad with strife Among the fields and woods and hills of Mars.

Some day perhaps we shall look on the face

Of one who dwells within that sister sphere,

And wonder if his soul has sweeter grace Than any soul of ours that sorrows here;

If he has loved as we may love, in vain; If he has striven in cruel coils of hate;

If loss with him has been the end of gain; If he has learned to live—and learned to late.

Yet it may be that this new brother dwells In ways more gentle than terrestrial ways,

That might bring peace to him and halo-yon spells.

That dawn are harbingers of golden days;

And it may be that he is patient, brave, Fraternal, yet forgiving, strong yet meek,

And that his world is like the dream we crave,

Like some Utopia we divinely seek.

—George Edward Montgomery in Harper's Magazine for September.

THE TIME OF ROSES.

"Why have you so persistently avoided me ever since—since well, since Lady Barkston's garden party?" I inquired of Miss Windram so soon as I succeeded in elbowing my way through the dead wall of Mrs. Bennett Wyse's guests who stood between us. The result of a brief calculation, entered on the next morning, was to convince me that, during the six minutes it took me playing the part of a pick in order to reach Miss Windram, I made as many enemies as I had made during the 30 years of my life preceding Mrs. Bennett Wyse's "at home."

"Have I avoided you, Mr. Glyn?" she asked, opening her eyes very wide and (but this was doubtful) very innocent.

"The question is not if you have done it, but why you have done it," I said, with some severity.

"Suppose I deny that is the question," she suggested, quite pleasantly, though without quite such a show of innocence as had been associated with her previous inquiry. It is quite possible to speak pleasantly without any particular exuberance of innocence.

"Suppose you deny it? Well, in that case you will have—have denied it," said I. "But it so happens that you won't deny it, Miss Windram."

"I'm not so sure of that. If anyone would make it worth my while I might."

"No one will make it worth your while. There is nothing left for you but to speak the truth."

"Great heavens! Is it come to that? Why have you avoided me? We were good friends up to that day—I have put a blue mark opposite that day in my diary."

"Yes, we were good friends; good friends are those who have a sound quarrel every time they meet, I suppose?"

"Precisely; friends whose friendship is strong enough to survive a quarrel."

"Did we quarrel that day?"

"We certainly did not. Where would society be if a man and a young woman quarreled because, when he asked her—"

"Is there any need for you to tell everyone in this stifling room what one problematically foolish young man asked a certainly idiotic young woman?"

I felt that there was something in her question. I had not, however, been speaking louder than usual; it only seemed so because of a sudden momentary diminution in the volume of sound proceeding from the 200 guests of Mrs. Bennett Wyse, who had all been speaking at the same moment. I tried to explain this to her, and then she asked me what I thought of Signora Duse as an interpreter of emotion as compared with Mme. Sara Bernhardt, and if I held that an actress who was an admirable exponent of the strongest emotions might be depended on to interpret the most powerful passions.

"It is a nice question," I felt bound to say. "Let us clear out from this ruck and I think I'll be able to tell you wish. The public are invariably idiots, the editor of the Universe announced in connection with that book of mine. He was right, though the fact that the public steadily refuse to buy the Universe, points in the other direction."

"Oh, it's all very well to try and throw the blame on the public," said Miss Windram, with a shrug, "but is that quite generous of you, Mr. Glyn?"

"Perhaps it isn't. Was it on account of the book you avoided me so carefully?"

"Oh, there were other things. The Geographical Society gave you a gold medal, didn't they?"

"They were right there. They couldn't get out of it."

"I daresay. That may be all very well, but people who get gold medals conferred on them can't expect to be treated as ordinary people."

"I suppose you are right. But do they want to be treated as ordinary people?"

"That's quite a side issue. I decline to discuss it."

"And that's all?"

"All? All? Heavens! what did you expect?"

"Sense—that is, a moderate amount of sense; reason—that is, a modicum of reason; frankness—that is, a soupçon of frankness. Supper? oh, let them go to—to supper."

And she let them.

We were left practically alone.

"Are you engaged to any man for supper?" I asked of Miss Windram.

"Yes," she replied. "I believed that I detected a mournful tone. If I had not detected that note I would have left her side."

"And I am engaged to some woman. Let us go to some place together," said I.

curious incident in train operations," says Locomotive Engineering. A through fast freight train arrived at London and one of the cars while being switched left the track. On examination it was found that the derailment was caused by one of the wheels having no tire. When a search for the missing tire was instituted it was found about 100 miles away. The car had run that distance without a tire. The most curious thing about the case was that the wheels were tapped and examined several times during the journey. This can be paralleled in this country by an incident on the New Jersey Central Railroad. A driver of an express train was flagged at Bergen Point, seven miles from New York—which distance was run at the rate of 50 miles per hour—and upon examination it was discovered that one of the forward truck wheels was gone entirely. The driver did not know it until told, but some one at a way station had noted the absence of the wheel and telegraphed to hold the train at Bergen Point, only a few miles further on.

Irrigation Beds and Health.

A German physician investigated the truth of the statement that irrigation beds are open to the suspicion of spreading infective diseases. He investigated the health of those persons living near the Berlin irrigation beds, which are the largest of the kind in the world. He says: "The irrigation beds have either caused no disease, or but slight disease amongst the persons living near and working upon them." He further says that properly managed irrigation beds are no source of danger to health, and that "up to the present they are by far the best method of dealing with the sewage of towns." The method is not complete, since it does not lead to the destruction of all pathogenic micro-organisms, as was at first expected. Drain water may contain bacilli of typhoid, etc., and therefore ought not to pass on the beds without previous disinfection.

THE CHIEF ENGINEER.

The "Empress of India's" Chief Engineer Tells an Interesting Story.

Mr. Francis Somerville, one of the best known men in the steamboat traffic on the rivers and lakes of Ontario, having been engaged in this business for fifty years, and who resides at No. 195 Upper Colborne Street, Kingston, speaks as follows of his recovery from the sickness which has affected him for some time.

Said Mr. Somerville: "The grip left me with kidney troubles and gravel. I had severe pain over the kidneys and in the small of my back, also between the shoulders and in the bladder.

"The urine was very dark-colored with a great deal of muddy sediment. I went to Mr. McLeod's drug store and bought two boxes of Doan's Kidney Pills. I have taken them with what people tell me is the usual good result.

"They have cleared the urine, removed the sediment, relieved me of distressing pain in the back and between the shoulders, and have built me up in a surprising manner. In fact, I am entirely free from the troubles which affected me before taking these remarkable pills, and I recommend them as a certain cure for all troubles arising from kidney disorders."

near my home when a passing wheelwoman just ahead of me attracted my attention. She was trim and neat and dressed in excellent taste. Her gray skirt just reached where her boot tops would ordinarily have been. She wore very high and nicely rounded tan shoes, however, and her feet and ankles looked decidedly trim and shapely. She wasn't riding, but had her wheel on the sidewalk, pushing it along. The vision was such a charming one, from the Tam o' Shanter hat to the very boot heels, that I lingered a little. Then I braced up and hurried past. Just as I did so a familiar voice called:

"Why, George, is that you? Didn't you know me?"

"Why, no, I didn't honestly," I replied and felt like rubbing my eyes. "That's awfully good," said the trim wheelwoman, with a merry laugh. "I was just going over to show Nellie my new wheel, and my new suit." "Say, what do you think?" "It was my mother-in-law, aged 57."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

His Fatal Blunder.

"Beautiful one," he said, "can't you forgive me? I will try to live it down. I will become great for your sake, and make the world envy you as my wife." "No," the fair girl replied, and there was a resolute ring in her voice. "It cannot be, I must respect the promise that I made to my mother upon her death bed."

He knelt at her feet and looked beseechingly up at her unmindful of the fact that the flies were congregating in droves upon his person.

"Jean," he groaned, "do not leave me out here alone. I cannot. I will not give you up. It would kill me. You are the only one I ever loved! You are the only one I ever can love. Say that you will recall the words that you have just spoke—I mean spoken."

"Ah," she interrupted, "there it is again! No, no, a thousand times no! It must not be! I am sorry for you, but we are not in the same class. I hope that some day you may find another who will make you happy."

Then she bounded lightly over the fence and started on a dog trot back toward Boston, while the young man laid his cheek upon an ant hill and wept.

ruck and I think I'll be able to tell you all that I know regarding the higher emotions. These people are not to be depended on; one minute they are talking fortissimo, the next they are pianissimo."

"Would you have them rehearsed, Mr. Glyn?"

"Well, a good deal might be done by judicious stage management."

"And a conductor with an ivory baton? There's something in that, I admit. Your idea is that they should become forte when you are speaking, so as to afford a sort of background for your wisdom?"

"Wisdom? What man with the least pretense to wisdom would come into a crowd like this for the sake of talking to a girl who has persistently avoided him for the past year and a month?"

"What man, indeed?" "And this brings us back to the original question. Why have you so persistently avoided me?"

I could see that she was a trifle put out by my persistence in returning to the topic which had originated with me. She had apparently found some imperfection in the feather tips of her fan, and thought that it would be unwise to neglect the opportunity of pulling off the uneven tufts. Some of them settled upon my waistcoat, where I allowed them to repose undisturbed; a few made a bee-line for the cavernous nostrils of our neighbor, Gen. Firebrace. He sneezed with considerable force of character.

"Well, you see, so many things have happened since May 3 last year, Mr. Glyn," said Miss Windram, when she had satisfied herself by the repeated opening and closing of her fan that she had remedied the defect in its construction.

"What things—in addition to your avoidance of me?" I asked.

"Well, you have published a book, to begin with. Isn't that something?" she said.

"If we avoid all the people who have published a book, our circle of acquaintance would become appreciably narrowed, Miss Windram. Anything else?"

"Hasn't it gone into six editions?" she cried, in a tone of accusation.

"I don't deserve the blame for that," said I, in a way that was meant to show her I felt the injustice of her accusation. "Blame the public, if you

You know her." "She is one of my dearest friends—now." "Ah—now." "Now, I said now. But a year ago—" "And a month." "And a month. If you hadn't remembered the exact date I should probably be at supper just now. A year and a month ago she was my one enemy. She knew that I loved you—yes, a year and a month ago I loved you in a sort of way—not the way I do now; and she knew that you loved me—in a sort of way. She commanded you to keep me at a distance. Your mother is not a woman of genius, but upon occasions she can be quite as disagreeable as though she were. She prefers, however, being disagreeable by deputy. You were her deputy, a year ago—and a month."

Miss Windram got up from beside me and took a few steps to the side of the conservatory, up which a splendid rose was clambering. She had had her eyes fixed on a spray. It would have been out of the reach of most girls, but she was very tall, and she managed to break it off the parent stem.

The light shone upon the white flesh of her round arms. Surely no living woman had such lovely arms.

She returned to her seat.

"Well?" she said.

"Then my poor uncle—"

"Poor?" She gave a laugh.

"My poor rich uncle died, leaving his money to me, and your mother told you that you were to draw me on. I could swear that those were her exact words. Did you pluck those roses only to tear off their petals?"

One rose lay wrecked at her feet. The other dropped from her hand and lay complete among the crimson flakes. She put her hand before her face.

"But instead of drawing me on, you persistently avoided me, and, in fact, did everything that was in your power to make me believe that you were sincere when you told me, at the command of your mother, that you had never heard anything more ridiculous than my suggestion that we should love each other; and that you hoped I would not think it necessary to repeat anything so absurd. You have failed in your aim, Rosamund; you did not make me believe in your sincerity. Was I right?"

I am certain that she gave a sob, but she did not take her hands down from her face.

"Look at your feet," I said suddenly. She was startled, and glanced down quickly. (Her gloves, I perceived, were ruined.) "Look at your feet. Which is to be my future—our future—our future, Rosamund? Which—The wrecked rose or the other?"

She picked up the complete rose and handed it to me.

I kissed it and then fastened it as well as I could in the front of her dress. The crimson petals lay upon her shell-pink flesh—it was shell-pink now where it had been white before.

And then— Then a man came up and said that we would do well to hurry into the supper room if we wanted a bite of anything.

I wanted something, but it was not supper.—Black and White.

John Brown's Grave.

John Brown's grave having been purchased with his farm, on which it stands, by the John Brown Association and by them presented to the state, a number of persons assembled there on July 31 to attend the ceremony of unveiling a monument to the memory of John Brown and his son Watson, and the erection of a flag pole sixty-three feet high to support the large flag presented by Colonel Lyman. A touching incident on the occasion was the singing of the historic hero's favorite hymn, "Blow Ye Trumpets, Blow," by an old negro who was one of the slaves brought to the farm by the "underground route," in the abolition days.

Mr. Laurier on Whiskey.

It has just leaked out that the Bar in the House of Commons was closed not for political thunder or to pull the wool over the eyes of the temperance people. Mr. Laurier found that to hold the fort he must have a sound, healthy, clear-headed party and therefore decided that intoxicants of every description must go and that every Reformer must stop drinking whiskey, tea and coffee and take nothing but Madden cereal, the hot food drink.

His Barn Burned.

George Gowdy, Camden, lost his barn by fire on Friday afternoon. He lost everything in it except a seeder and wagon. He was excavating under the barn for a stable and had put in a blast, covering it as he thought securely, but a piece of the fuse must have reached some straw for in a few minutes they noticed straw on fire. Having no water on hand helpers endeavored to smother it, burning their hands thereby. It could not be overcome and in a few minutes the barn was a mass of flames.

Regret His Departure.

The many friends of Dr. Simpson will regret to learn of his intended departure from Deseronto, having bought out the practice of Dr. Grant, of Napanee, to which place he will go in a few weeks' time. The doctor came to Deseronto about two years ago from his home in Orangeville and has worked up a good sized practice. He formerly practiced for some time in Toronto. He will be succeeded here by E. Sayers Hicks, M.B., M.D.C.M., of Port Dover.—Deseronto Correspondent Belleville Sun.

The Baby Show.

The baby show on the evening of the first day of the Lennox County show, Tuesday next, 22d inst., promises to be the best exhibition of its kind ever seen in Napanee. The prize for the handsomest baby girl, one year old or under, is a life size crayon portrait, value $15, given by J. S. Hulett. The printers furnish the prize for the best baby boy, $1 for the 1st, $3 for the 2d, and $2 for the 3d. An elevated platform has been erected to give visitors a better opportunity to see the judging of the babies. Lady judges will officiate and the prizes will be awarded on Tuesday evening. Don't fail to attend.

Your Child's Eyesight.

Recent statistics from one of the largest cities in the world show that one child out of every four has some defect in his sight more or less serious. This proves the necessity of parents giving this matter the attention it deserves and thus prevent their children from being handicapped in life's race. Our optician gives such cases most careful attention, you run no risk and have the benefit of his long and practical experience. Do not hesitate if your eyes trouble you. Our optician has become so expert in the art of correcting defective eyes that people come from distant parts of the province to consult him. He is examining eyes every week day and in the evenings, free of charge, at his office, Smith's Jewelry Store.

Our National Magazine

Twenty two writers contribute to the September number of THE CANADIAN MAGAZINE. Hon J. W. Longley writes of "The Silver Question," and the editor of "Bi-Metallism." Perhaps the most important contribution is the first instalment of "Through the Sub-Arctic of Canada," by J. W. Tyrrell, C.E., D.L.S. In 1893 the writer and his brother took a 3,200 mile canoe and snowshoe trip from Edmonton, via Lake Athabasca and the Telzoa River.

A Correction.

We owe an apology to our Tamworth correspondent, who is noted for the reliability of his news. In last week's EXPRESS we made him say: "Mr. Patrick Way has bought a farm in Stirlington," while the following is what he wrote: "Mr. Patrick Way has bought James York's farm; Jas. York has bought a farm in Stirlington." Mistakes will creep in occasionally.

Funeral of Mrs. Cliff.

The funeral of the late Mrs. Geo. A. Cliff, sr., who passed away on Thursday afternoon of last week, at the advanced age of 70 years, took place from her late residence, Graham street, to the E. M. church and thence to the Napanee cemetery on Sunday afternoon last. Argyll lodge, No. 212, I. O. O. F., reinforced by brethren from Napanee lodge, No. 86, attended in a body as a mark of respect to the bereaved husband, who is an honored member of that society.

Wedding Bells.

An interesting event took place on Wednesday evening, the 16th inst., at the residence of Wm. Wild, Esq., Camden, it being the marriage of his youngest daughter, Miss Francis L. Wild, to Mr. Jas. Russell, of South Fredericksburgh, second son of Mr. John Russell, of the Township of Richmond. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. W. Lambert, of Selby, in the presence of a large number of the relatives of the contracting parties. After the usual greeting the guests repaired to the dining room and did ample justice to the elaborate wedding feast.

Deserted His Wife.

Ebenezer Bartels left town "without beat of drum," taking his child by his first wife with him, and leaving the woman, to whom he was married but a few months ago, with out money, food or furniture, as he removed all the household effects before he left. It is said that the goods are stored in Richmond township with a man who helped in their removal. The only reason the deserted wife can give for her abandonment is that she had no money when she married Ebenezer, and he thought she had. Mrs. Bartels, who is a very respectable woman, was for two years previous to her marriage in the employment of Mrs. John McCullough, Dundas street, as a domestic.—Deseronto Tribune.

In Camp.

Capt. Smith's company, accompanied by the 47th Batt. band, left for Barriedfield on Tuesday, where they go into camp. The boys presented a natty appearance, and there was a good sized crowd out to see them off as they passed through town on Tuesday morning on their way to the station.

A Beneficent Effect.

F. Vandeborg left at THE EXPRESS office on Thursday a bunch of blue grass, one of the stocks of which measured 9 feet 8 inches in length. Mr. Vandeborg says this shows the beneficent effect of Grit Government, as the longest this grade of grass ever grew under Tory rule was seven feet.

Another Fish Story.

A clergyman in this district called on a member of his congregation last Sunday. During his stay he fell to interrogating the bright seven-year-old son of his host. The boy got along swimmingly until the reverend gentlemen queried: "Don't you like to attend Sunday school?" "You bet," was the response, "I was going to Sunday school today, only I'm going fishing."

Death of Mrs. Kouber.

It is with feelings of deep regret that we are called upon to chronicle the death of Mrs. Kouber, wife of V. Kouber, marble cutter, which occurred suddenly at the Hotel Dieu, Kingston, on Saturday morning last, about 10 o'clock. Mrs. Kouber entered the Hotel Dieu on Thursday of last week to have a tumor, from which she had suffered for a number of years, operated upon. She was unable to bear up under the operation and passed away on Saturday last. Her husband was with her during the trying ordeal and at the time of her death. The remains were conveyed to Napanee on Saturday afternoon and the funeral took place from the R. C. church on Sunday. Mrs. Kouber, whose maiden name was Jennie Thompson, was esteemed and beloved by her large circle of acquaintances for her many good qualities and kindness of heart. She was a great friend of the sick and was highly spoken of as a neighbor. She was 47 years of age, and her bereaved husband and two children, Beatrice and Vincent, will have the sympathy of all in their affliction. Deceased was a devout member of the Catholic church, having embraced that faith after her marriage, and the funeral from the Roman Catholic church on Sunday to the R. C. cemetery was largely attended, testifying to the respect and esteem in which the departed lady was held.

port of the congregation. The new seats are of handsome manufacture and are set in a semi-circular fashion. The floor has been newly carpeted and a handsome new pulpit has been erected. The windows are all new with the exception of the large ornamental centre window facing Bridge street. Mrs. Doxsee has presented the church with a beautiful memorial window in memory of her late husband. The window occupies the west side of the edifice and adds much to its appearance. The old fashioned gallery has been taken away entirely and its abolishment is a decided improvement. The painting and kalsomining is artistic and beautiful and the church is very complete and pretty. The formal opening on Sunday drew out immense crowds and in the evening the church was altogether too small to accommodate the people and many had to be turned away. Principal Grant preached two able and eloquent sermons. It is reported that a new pipe organ will be added shortly.

The Cricketers Vanquished.

The 11th inst. proved a black Friday for the Cricketers. Ever since they defeated the Printers' nine they have been hugging themselves with the delusion that they could trounce any baseball aggregation in town. On Friday last they ran up against a selected team from the town and were beaten to the tune of 21 to 16. It was a great and exciting game of baseball and the large crowd present grew wildly enthusiastic at times. It was some time after three o'clock p.m. before all the preliminaries incidental to a struggle of this character were adjusted, and umpire E. Vanalstine set the ball in motion by sending the town team to the bat. Livesley, the bright and particular star of the town team, was the first to face "Shorty" Trimble, the deceptive curve manufacturer of the Cricketers. He connected with his delivery at once and rapped the sphere out for a two bagger. He stole third and came home on Armstrong's sacrifice hit, averting a whitewash. Pitcher Armstrong didn't strike his feet until the third innings and the Cricketers knocked out six runs in the first innings and three in the second in nings while he was locating himself. After this, however, he settled down to biz and pitched a really excellent game, shutting out the opposing side three times in five innings. Albert Root put up a good game behind the bat and his throwing to bases was excellent. After the second innings the town team cottoned right on to Trimble and batted him all over the field. Towards the last of the game that usually steady young twirler grew a trifle wild and sent a number of men to bases on dead balls. Livesley at first base, was a tower of strength and put up an errorless game. He gathered in a number of hard flies and embraced everything else that came within his reach. The Rev. W. W. Peck held down third base for the town and demonstrated that he knows considerable about the game called base ball. At the bat he rapped out a beautiful three bagger and was always able to connect with the ball. Mr. Peck is at home at the sprint and when he let out after H. Daly, who was legging it back to second after an unsuccessful attempt to reach third, and caught him before that player could cover half the distance he electrified the crowd. Harrison at left field played his usual good game and gathered in a number of difficult flys. S. Lockridge at first base, and W. Rockwell behind the bat, both put up a good game. Fred Sheppard covered himself with glory by catching a hot fly off J. G. Daly and sending it to third, putting out H. Daly and retiring the side. Leamy played a very consistent game. The crowd were unanimous and very outspoken in the matter of awarding him the palm as the champion "fan." He furnished a very fine exhibition of how the game should not be played. Livesley holds the record as the champion heavy batter. In the fourth innings he batted the ball out of the lot, making a home run and taking in two men. Gates, Peck, W. Rockwell and Skates had three baggers to their credit. The town team went in for their eighth innings and had two runs and one out, and two men on bases when the game was called on account of darkness. The following is the score:

Resolution of Condolence.

The following is a copy of a resolution passed by the members of Argyll Lodge, No. 212, I. O. O. F:

Geo. Cliffe, Sr., Esq.:

Dear Sir and Bro.—In accordance with a resolution, moved by Brother Walters, seconded by Brother Carson and unanimously adopted at the regular meeting of Argyll Lodge No. 212 I. O. O. F. on the evening of Thursday the 10th inst., in which, your great age, your long term of membership, your being a charter member of the Lodge, and the great esteem in which you are held, especially by the older members of the lodge, were fully expressed, we beg most affectionately to express the hearty sympathy of the Lodge with you in your recent bereavement by the death of your beloved partner in life.

As you are well versed in the teachings of our noble order, we know that you have not lived without considering the end of life and the separation from loved ones here, but we also know that when from long association as husband and wife, one has learned to depend upon the "Friendship, Love and Truth" of the other almost as much as upon himself and when such a one is removed by death, we also know that the rending of the heartstrings must be painful to a high degree, the feelings of desolation must be very great and our hearts go out in sympathy to you, our brother.

We rejoice in the high esteem in which you and your late wife have been held by the community at large, and the assurance you have of being, perhaps at no distant day, reunited where death cannot enter and where there is ample joy in the presence of the Saviour, whom you have both so faithfully served here for so long.

We earnestly commend you to the love of our Heavenly Father, before whom we must all soon appear for judgment.

Signed on behalf the lodge,

T. F. OLIVER,
J. D. BISSETT, M.D.,
J. S. ROBINSON.

FALL PRICE LIST NO. 1.

The new Fall Stock invites you.
We ask you to see these departments.

DRESS GOODS.

More absolutely new Dress Goods than we have ever shown at one time. They begin very low in price and don't go very high, yet we think you will find the season's prettiest things among them and a perfect Trimming for each one. Ask to see our pattern dresses.

NEW MANTLES.

Will interest you now. We think the new ones we show will interest you particularly. The change in style is marked and is distinctly elegant. The prices average lower than in former seasons and the Cloths are better. They are ready to show to-day.

FLANNELETTES.

We don't believe that any store you know of can give you as good money's worth in Flannelettes as we can just now. We know that no store here can show you so many of them. More like new Dress Tweeds than Flannelettes most of the new patterns are.

NEW CLOAKINGS

Beavers, Whitneys, Serges, Curles, Boucle's, Golf Cloths, Tweeds, Presidents. Many materials and colorings that have every new fashion idea in them and you don't need a pocketful of money to get a nice article either. They form a large and bright department and are all ready for fall business.
